CLICKSAFETY LAUNCHES COMPREHENSIVE NFPA 70E TRAINING

NFPA 70E: A Users Guide to Electrical PPE – delivers expertise, robust info and guidance to help keep workers safe from electrical hazards

ALAMO, Calif., Nov. 4, 2010 – ClickSafety, the country’s leading provider of online construction safety training, today introduced NFPA 70E A User’s Guide to Electrical PPE, a robust online training course, updated to the latest (2009) standards, that offers invaluable safety guidance for electrical contractors, electricians, contractors, maintenance personnel and others who work with electrical installations.

NFPA (National Fire Protection Agency) 70E is the standard for electrical safety in the workplace.

NFPA 70E A User’s Guide to Electrical PPE was adapted from the booklet, “A User’s Guide to Electrical PPE, Based on NFPA 70E,” by Ray A. Jones, a top-ranking expert in electrical safety and chairman of the NFPA 70E Technical Committee, and Jane G. Jones. Their expertise results in an unmatched resource that not only enables OSHA compliance for participants, but more importantly, helps prevent electrical accidents and injuries.

The three-and-a-half hour course gives participants a thorough overview of 2009 NFPA 70E requirements for personal protective equipment (PPE), teaches them how to analyze electrical risks and hazards, and take the actions needed to avoid injuries.

As with all ClickSafety offerings, the course enables companies and participants to save time, travel and money through 24/7, user-friendly online training. Training completion and compliance can be tracked real-time, and ClickSafety’s multi-lingual, easy-to-access portal delivers training in a way participants can quickly understand and absorb. Participants will receive a printable certificate validating completion.

NFPA 70E A User’s Guide to Electrical PPE can be purchased by calling (800) 971-1080 or contacting <mailto:sales@clicksafety.com>. Discounted group rates are available.
